Graphic Designer (and the rest of the team)

SENT JUNE 2026

PROFILE

You posted a job for one graphic designer. This is an application from an entire design team. Same brief, more experience, a fraction of the cost, and none of the risk that comes with betting a salary on a single hire.

Pause anytime.

With us there is no lock-in, no notice and certainly no redundancy. Better yet, right now there's a 10-day free trial, including 4 hours of free design work

$30

vs

$54

Per hour, all in. The right column priced against an $80k salary, fully loaded.

Sick anytime.

When you hire someone, you're locked in alright... Notice when they leave? If they feel like it. Redundancy, yeah right like they'll stay that long

OPTION A

Hire in-house, it's on you

- 01 Pick the wrong person and that call is on you. A bad hire takes months and a small fortune to undo.
- 02 The salary is fixed. Their workload is not. A dead week costs you exactly the same as a flat-out one.
- 03 They call in sick and the work stops. You keep paying anyway.
- 04 They take leave and your design output goes with them. Deadlines do not care.
- 05 One hire is one skill set. The brief that needs branding, web and motion is suddenly three gaps you have to fill.
- 06 They resign and your brand knowledge walks out the door. Then you start the whole gamble again.
- 07 Hiring is weeks of ads, screening and interviews before a single pixel moves.
- 08 One designer is one opinion. No second set of eyes, so every piece rides on them having a good day.
- 09 The salary is the small print. Add super, payroll tax, software and hardware before a single design lands.
- 10 When the work piles up, one person is the ceiling. Everything queues behind them.

OPTION BEES

The obvious choice

THE HIRE

- 01 No gamble. A proven team from day one, and you can walk away whenever you want.
- 02 You only pay when there is work. Quiet stretch, or closed over the holidays? Pause it.
- 03 Your designer off sick? Another steps in and the work still gets delivered.
- 04 We do not take annual leave. Your output never stops because one person is away.
- 05 Not one skill set, a full team. Branding, web, print and motion, no gaps to cover.
- 06 Your brand lives with the team, not one person who can hand in their notice.
- 07 No hiring. You start in days, not months.
- 08 A dedicated account manager who knows your local market scopes every brief and signs off quality before you see a thing. On hand through your working day.
- 09 One fee, everything in. No super, no payroll tax, no software bills, no kit to buy.
- 10 Scale up the day you get busy. Scale down the day you do not. No redundancy, no awkward chat.

VERBATIM, FROM CURRENT CLIENTS

Using Design Bees has saved us a huge amount of time (staff were previously spending hours faffing on Canva). I've been exceptionally happy with the output, the service & the professionalism. Cannot recommend highly enough!

THE QUESTION NO ONE PUTS ON A JOB AD

What happens when your designer is off sick?

HIRE IN-HOUSE

You keep paying their salary, and the work stops until they are back.

USE DESIGN BEES

We allocate you a dedicated designer, but when they are off, another designer picks up the work. It still gets delivered. You never pay for a desk sitting empty.

WHY US

Not a marketplace. A dedicated designer who learns your brand.

Freelance marketplaces hand you a different person for every job, so you re-explain your brand from scratch every time. With Design Bees you get the same dedicated designer for the life of your subscription. We are an Australian business based in Surry Hills, working on your timezone, 8am to 6pm AEST, and we specialise in Australian markets. Your designer learns your brand and learns you, how you like your outputs and what good looks like to you. No re-briefing from scratch, no offshore guesswork.

$30 vs $54

One in-house hire costs you about $54 p/h ($80k annual salary) of actual work once you add super and the weeks they are on leave or sick. A full Design Bees team is $30 p/h. And we only bill when you have work for us.
